France is home to some of the world's most renowned museums, housing priceless works of art and artifacts from centuries past. A visit to France would not be complete without a stop at some of these iconic institutions.

The Louvre in Paris is perhaps the most famous museum in the world, and for good reason. The massive complex is home to over 35,000 works of art, spanning from ancient Egyptian antiquities to paintings by masters like Leonardo da Vinci and Rembrandt. With so much to see, visitors could easily spend days exploring the Louvre.

Also in Paris is the Musée d'Orsay, which houses an impressive collection of Impressionist and Post-Impressionist paintings. The former railway station turned museum is particularly well-known for its extensive collection of works by Claude Monet.

Outside of Paris, France boasts many other world-renowned museums. The Centre Pompidou in Metz features a unique "inside out" design and houses a large collection of modern and contemporary art. The Musée de l'Orangerie in Lyon is home to a series of massive Monet murals, while the Picasso Museum in Antibes showcases one of the largest collections of the artist's work in the world.

These are just a few of the must-see museums France has to offer. From world-famous collections to lesser-known gems, there is something for everyone to enjoy on a visit to France's many museums.
