France is home to some of the most beautiful villages in the world. From the picturesque streets of Saint-Paul-de-Vence to the charming medieval village of Eguisheim, there are plenty of charming destinations to discover. Here are 10 of the most beautiful villages in France that are well worth a visit.

Saint-Paul-de-Vence: This medieval walled village is one of the most popular tourist destinations in the French Riviera. With its winding streets and pretty flower-filled courtyards, it's easy to see why. There are also plenty of art galleries and museums to explore, as well as some great restaurants.

Eguisheim: This pretty Alsace village is often referred to as the "capital of wine" due to the many vineyards that surround it. It's also a great place to try some traditional Alsatian dishes such as choucroute (sauerkraut) and tarte flambée (a type of flatbread).

Roussillon: This village in Provence is known for its stunning red cliffs which contrast beautifully with the green vines that surround it. It's a great place to enjoy some traditional Provençal cuisine and there are also some lovely walks to be had in the area.

Gordes: Another Provençal village, Gordes is perched atop a hill and offers stunning views over the Luberon Valley. Be sure to visit the 12th century Abbey de Sénanque which is surrounded by lavender fields.

Saint-Cirq Lapopie: This village in southwest France is often referred to as one of the most beautiful villages in the country. It's situated on a cliff overlooking the Lot River and is home to some lovely medieval buildings.

Bourg-en-Bresse: This town in eastern France is best known for its chicken dish, poulet de Bresse. However, there's more to Bourg-en-Bresse than just food. The town has a beautiful medieval old town and a magnificent Renaissance palace.

Saint-Émilion: This village in Bordeaux is famous for its wine but it's also worth visiting for its stunning architecture. The cobbled streets and ancient buildings make for a very atmospheric setting.

Collonges-la-Rouge: As its name suggests, this village in central France is notable for its red sandstone buildings which give it a distinctive appearance. It's a great place to wander around and admire the architecture or enjoy a meal in one of the excellent restaurants.

Rochefort-en-Terre: This picturesque village in Brittany has been voted one of the "most beautiful villages in France" on several occasions. With its half-timbered houses and flower-filled streets, it's easy to see why.
